

PRAXIS Australia's Online Ethics Training Course enables members and administrative staff of a Human Research Ethics Committee (HREC) to better understand the principles and values of ethical conduct and issues in research, with particular reference to the National Statement on Ethical Conduct in Human Research (2007).

The course is designed to be flexible, allowing students to learn at their own pace. We recommend that the course can be completed within three months, with a commitment on average of 1.5 hours of study time per week.

Students will:

- Watch a series of videos from human research ethics experts across four targeted topics
- Complete the required workbooks which encourage students to reflect on their learning and own experiences
- Receive a Certificate of Completion upon submission and review of all four workbooks

The course is now open for enrolment and you can enrol at any time.
