

Promoting Ethics and Education in Research

Nationally Accredited Essential Human Research Ethics Committee (HREC) Training Course

PRAXIS Australia provides a rich array of training resources for HREC members and administrators, researchers and others involved in the planning, review and conduct of research.

Our nationally accredited Essential HREC Training Course provides a deeper understanding of the purpose and function of an HREC and all roles within the committees.

The course is supported by leading experts in the field of Human Research Ethics and provides an important opportunity for students to engage with thought leaders and their peers in a supportive learning environment.

The qualifications attained are recognised across other settings including tertiary academic institutions, providing a pathway to continued educational opportunities.

During this course students will be involved in webinar, online and workshop learning environments. The workshops will be facilitated by leading Human Research Ethics experts and will be conducted at various locations nationally.

The anticipated course duration is 3 months, with an average commitment of 1.5 hours per week.
